WORKSHOP OBJECTIVE

A new Workplace Fairness Act covering the scope of protections against discrimination and employers' obligations was passed on 8 Jan 2025 and a second bill, Workplace Fairness (Dispute Resolution), to amend the Act to provide for mediation of workplace fairness disputes was passed on 4 Nov 2025. MOM aims for the Act to take effect in end-2027 and employers (senior management eg CEO/MD/GM, HR, managers, supervisors and executives) are expected to prepare and familiarise with the obligations and the framework for compliance.

This workshop is specially designed to provide a good understanding during pre-employment, in-employment and end-employment (including post-employment) of the protections against workplace discrimination, the prohibition to make adverse employment and management decisions based on a set of protected characteristics, resolving disputes amicably, and the need to establish grievance handling processes to facilitate dispute resolution.

WORKSHOP OUTLINE

- Employer's obligation under the Workplace Fairness Act
- Workplace Fairness Framework
- Protected characteristics
- Discrimination and exceptions
- Employment decisions – hiring, during employment and end-employment
- Handling of grievances and resolving of disputes
- Prohibition against retaliation
- Review of related HR polices and processes such as recruitment (application form, interview and selection), performance appraisal, promotion, training and termination including dismissal and retrenchment)
